U.S. Mounts Guns in Top Sugar Mills

HAVANA, Nov. 3 (UPI)—Red man is sending arms to Cuba, presumably to train pilots for Russian-made jets expected to join Premier Fidel Castro's Air Force, it was reported yesterday.

Informed sources said some U.S. airmen have already arrived.

At the same time, it was reported that the Castro regime is arming Communist-made anti-aircraft guns with late-model control equipment on the part of each of Cuba's sugar mills.

THE GUNS apparently were intended to protect the mills from air attack during the incoming sugar processing season. Light planes attacked a series of sugar mills and planes last year, destroying tons of sugar.

At a meeting here Sunday, Castro selected several hundred unemployed Cubans for training in the use of the anti-aircraft guns which have been imported here from Red Czechoslovakia.

The guns were part of the recently received shipments of anti-aircraft arms, believed to include tanks and field artillery.

INCONCLUSIVE reports say the Cuban workers are learning the use of Russian technicians who are assembling MIG jet fighters at a heavily-guarded airfield in Western Cuba.

Diplomatic sources in New York said superconstellations from Britain have been making daily flights to Central America and the Caribbean for the past week. They said the planes, loaded with special photographic equipment, have been spying on La Ceiba, Nicaragua, El Salvador and the Swan Islands off Costa Rica.

INVASION? Jitters here eased today as the result of a series of statements changing the anti-line from "attack is imminent" to "if invasion comes." The change was first made on television last night by Jesus Soto, leader of the Union Federation.

Cuban workers are ready for mercenaries, should they decide to come," Soto said. "Not a dollar will be spent."

On Saturday, when all Cubans evaded the invasion was hours away.

Others who had made similar statements included Castro and President Osvaldo Dorticos. In 200-kilometer-born (Miguel) Che Guevara said flatly he does not expect an armed attack on Cuba.

THOU STILL, COOL AND CLEAN—Getting in character for their roles in the Sophomore Class Assembly to be presented Friday morning are Verl Doman (I), the assembly narrator, Lane Bateman and Charles Johnson, assembly chairman.

Sophomores to Present Show For Friday Student Assembly

The annual sophomore assembly depicting the theme—"Thou Still, Cool, and Clean", will be presented Friday at 10 a.m. in the Smith Fieldhouse.

The assembly, a dramatic portrayal of the lives of two individuals and their interpretation of the meaning of life, death, and "clean" is an original script written by Doug Stewart.

Six scenes utilizing the medium of speech, drama, dance, and a complete musical background will depict the unusual drama, according to the general assembly chairman, Charles Johnson.

Featuring in the leading roles will be Dennis Allen as Mary and Lane Bateman as Bill. The second act will be done by Verl Doman and Allen Earl.

Carol Bolster has served as assembly chairman for the assembly.

Ducats Release Set for Friday

Tickets for the New Mexico-Brigham Young University football game will be given out Friday immediately after the freshman football game at the ticket office at the top of the stadium.

Students may buy a ticket in the Fieldhouse ticket office and then bring that ticket to the stadium ticket booth to exchange tickets in order to sit by student friends.

The ticket per person is the limit. No exceptions will be made, according to Ralph Waltman of Blue Key. Units wishing to sit together can get tickets in a block for section E.

Everyone will be required to show a current student body activity card with picture to get game tickets.

Parties Toss Challenge to Young BYU Voters

Which Party Should the Young Voter Join?" was the question debated last evening in Freedom Week debate.

Republican beliefs were presented by Dr. John H. Stambaugh, vice chancellor of Vanderbilt University. Democratic view was expressed by Dr. John Grubbs, president of the Provo for Kennedy organization, professor of economics at University of Colorado.

R. JOHN GRUBBS said the voters offer the challenge to young voters for the decade of '60's. He declared that the democratic standard is "making life a little easier for the working man."

Dr. Stambaugh climaxed his speech by declaring that "our society cannot be defeated if it is true to itself," and that it can be done through individual initiation and decision.

challenge. He reviewed presidential campaign issues, including attack on prestige, farm policies, lack of moral purpose and "failure to seek our own place in the sun."

DR. JOHN Stambaugh presented conservative Republican political philosophy. He expressed fear of danger to Americans without and from within and declared that the internal danger, the increasing tendency of our people to let the government do all for them," was the greater danger.

Dr. Stambaugh climaxed his speech by declaring that "our society cannot be defeated if it is true to itself," and that it can be done through individual initiation and decision.

Institute Prof Calls Prophet Aware of Time

"Become aware of what is occurring in the world" religiously, politically and socially, was the challenge issued by T. Edgar Lyon, president of the Brigham Young University devotional assembly Wednesday.

Lyon is director of the LDS Institute of Religion at the University of Utah and has written handbook for priesthood handbook for the study of the Book of Mormon.

THE PROPHET Joseph Smith is an example of one who was aware of problems of his time, Lyon claimed. The articles of faith support this as each one corresponds to an important historical problem.

The first article of faith clarifies the Mormon position as opposing the controversial Unitarian concept of God. The second opposes the other churches' doctrine of original sin.

ONE OF THE most shocking movements of Joseph Smith's day was Universalism, which professed that all would be saved." The third article of faith told the people that "all shall be saved; but only if they obey the commandments, the speaker explained.

The fourth article "set us apart from the Campbellites" movement which said that all Campbellites should be disbanded and disorganized. The Campbellites believed in the first three principles but claimed that no one had the priesthood.

LYON CHALLENGED the audience to assume three responsibilities. "Become aware what are the religious ideas and needs of the people of the world."

He urged the students to "use your studies" and "prepare yourselves to be as effective as possible in meeting the challenges to come."

"The main purpose of the Republican Party is to preserve America and the present form of government from the onslaught of the left."

So stated Dr. Richard D. Poll, a Republican, in the American Forum last night in 184 Knight Auditorium. To his immediate left was seated Dr. Stewart Grow, a Democrat. Later in the debate Dr. Grow was asked by moderator Marvin Melville, a Democrat, quoted a story in which the gentleman involved stated that he was tired of dealing with middle men, "he was going to vote for the Pope."

LATER ON in the discussion Dr. Poll stated that the problem of arguing with Dr. Grow is that if there is anything "honorable, praiseworthy or of good report," Dr. Grow would be interested.

Dr. Poll, a Democrat, took position of the mike when he returned, "I can't deny the truth."

In charge of the panel was Freedom Week committee chairman Ron Walker, and members Don Udall, Julie Pingree and Craig Chapman. The audience consisted of about 500 students who should be selected on the basis mem-

France Expects Defeat In Debate Over Algeria

PARIS, Nov. 3 (UPI)—President Charles De Gaulle has resigned France to certain defeat in this year's United Nations debate on Algeria, government sources disclosed today.

In a General Assembly vote the French expect to be opposed by the entire Communist bloc, most of the Afro-Asian bloc which recently has been vastly enlarged and many of the "neutralist" countries.

The United States, which angered France by abstaining in the voting last year, still has not made its position clear.

But last year France avoided defeat by only one vote, and with the large number of new African members this year French officials see no hope.

The Algerian rebel "government" in exile in Tunis so far has not been recognized officially by the United Nations—the United Arab Republic, Yemen, Iraq, Libya, Tunisia, Jordan, Morocco, Sudan, Lebanon, Guinea, Ghana, Liberia, Ceylon and Indonesia.

The Soviet Union recently granted the rebels "De Facto" recognition.

There is no firm indication yet that a very tough resolution by the General Assembly—such as setting up an Algerian referendum under U. N. supervision—will be adopted. Such a move would cause France to pull out of the United Nations.

Naturally the French are hoping for something more moderate; such as a simple appeal for both sides to sit down and discuss under U. N. auspices or just a resolution calling for peace in Algeria.

But the pressure has been increasing on the French government at home as well as abroad for a settlement of the six-year-old Algerian conflict.

Rightists were campaigning hard to keep Algeria French Leftists were campaigning just as hard to stop the war at any price.

Recent statements by the Algerian rebels and their friends hint that Moscow and Peking may throw arms and "volunteers" in to the battle, although French sources regard this as more of a threat than a real possibility.

John Lee, a graduate student, won the annual Jong organ award for 1960.

Sheldon Dahl, also a graduate student, is in the bishopric of BYU 7th Ward. He will be leaving for military service in November.

General Fugal, from Pleasant Grove, graduated from Brigham Young University this spring. She is now teaching school in American Fork.

Professors Give Lively Debate on Party Issues

"The main purpose of the Republican Party is to preserve America and the present form of government from the onslaught of the left."

Editorials...

THANK YOU, SIR—Just like that and Howard Uibel (r) has a new movie discount card. Watching the cash deal of Uibel and Intercollegiate Knight Jim D. Mortenson is Toni Zierler, IK's sell the cards to local theaters to raise money for a special fund.

Movies For Charity

The way we see it, everyone wins by purchasing movie discount cards from the Intercollegiate Knights. The student who buys the cards only one dollar gets admitted to one show for that amount, and from then on he receives a discount on every show he goes to. This is such a good deal for the students that we know many who buy two tickets—so their dates will be cheaper. If a student has as little money as we do this is a real selling point.

The theatre manager wins because he gets more student business. Students make up such a large part of the Provo theatre-going audience that when school lets out in the spring one movie house closes down entirely.

The university wins because money collected from sales of the discount cards are used in three ways:

First, a large share of it is given directly to the Campus Chest fund, which includes most worthy charities.

Second, student scholarships are given by the IK's to the tune of $2500 a year.

Third, special projects, such as the mural in the Joseph Smith Bldg. are paid for from these funds. We are doing a great service to the University by selling these cards, and they should have the support of the student body.

After all, how else can you contribute to charity, scholarships, and the university in such a painless way.

Have We Wandered?

"The country has become a jungle in which our placid people are concerned only with themselves, their families and their possessions. Like grubs, they never see the light because they spend their time groveling in the loam of materialism, too busy to look up and beyond."

So wrote an author in describing our present culture in America.

Is he right? A national magazine thinks so as is evidenced by a series of articles on our national purpose—or lack of it—which it published.

"Dangers to our Democratic system of government are largely from within . . ." So we have been told by an increasing number of citizens who are becoming concerned with the apathy which Americans have almost made a virtue, decay.

A look at some outstanding examples of our moral decay shows a country claiming itself to be the citadel of Democracy, yet fewer qualified voters cast ballots than in any civilized nation on earth.

Everyone knows our system is best—they've been told so since they were children—but Communism has won more converts in 40 years than Christianity in 2,000 and Democracy in 184.

Our schools concern themselves with "building useful citizens" (that of all arrests made in one year in our country, 90% were under 18) while other systems concentrate on developing intellect.

These and other problems—and they are extremely serious problems facing our nation—are difficult to resolve. It is even more difficult to place blame, since apparently everyone is caught in the same frighteningly endless chain of cause and result from indifference.

Most observers agree on one thing however. Before we can expect any changes, we'll have to awaken ourselves.

The Freedom Forum being sponsored on campus today by the University and Provo Chamber of Commerce is a step in the right direction. Certainly the university should take the lead in the Utah County area in informing not only students but also the citizens of the dangers facing us.

Inquiring Photographer...Is Y Football Mature?

by Terry Calvert

Daily Universe Photographer

Question: Do you think BYU's football policies are mature enough to warrant its being accepted into a bigger, tougher conference?

J. DeMONT DOCKSTADER, senior: "Yes, I think they are. I think with a better recruiting policy, BYU could stand the move up. I've talked to players of other schools and they say that the reason they have gone there is because of a generally better football deal. There are first string players at both Utah and Utah State that are returned missionaries. Why did they choose those schools?"

Lowell Berg, senior: "I feel they have the potential. But somewhere in the wings of the higher machinery—coaching, recruiting, somewhere—they are failing. I've seen a lot of these BYU players play in high school and I know they have the ability. Somehow they don't do as well when they come here. But really I'd like to see them stay in the Skyline at least until these problems can be ironed out."

Jim Anderson, senior: "I think that BYU is having a hard time dealing with the transition to the Skyline. I'd like to see the Skyline conference kept for BYU's sake. I don't believe that this school is really behind football."

Ted Davidson, junior: "Yes I think that policies are mature enough—in fact the most mature of any college I know. However it is because other schools do not have as mature policies that BYU cannot compete with them. I am in favor of enlarging this budget. If I could rather see 10 new faculty personnel added than have a winning football team."

Bernard T. It has mature policies. I think it would avoid the next conference."

Kathleen Stewart, junior: "I think that BYU shouldn't move into a new conference until they can first prove themselves in the one they are in. I think back at the past season with the schools who aren't even being considered for the conference. It's pitiful! How can people expect us to have great school spirit when we don't do so well?"

Steve Tingey, freshman: "I think even though they aren't doing so good this year they will in the future because of the scholarship plan they have now. I think by keeping up with the rest of the teams, they will have quality teams in the next couple of years. By joining the new conference they will bring added prestige to the school."

I think, too, school spirit is affected by good or poor athletic teams."

Cathy Seelt, junior: "I'm not much of a football fan but the way they look now we're doing very well. I think we should apply ourselves more and use more the principle of faith. Our Church standards teach faith and works. Perhaps we aren't applying these standards as much as we should. We should improve ourselves before joining the new conference and perhaps placing ourselves as a door mat."

Jeffrey Freeman: "I don't know exactly what the aim is here at BYU, but I think the football situation is in accordance with tradition. It just isn't a big thing here—it so seems to me. Our aim is to do our best with what we have. I think we are setting an example."

"I think the team should win once in a while, but as long as we have a coach who can keep us from getting too high and losing then I don't think it's bad to lose. Just so we are trying and not sluffing. As far as the new conference—maybe as far as we set our goals higher, we might try a little harder. GEE—I don't know."

man to Woman ...

Pity Poor Man -- He's Just a Custard

by Patricia McCormack
United Press International

CW YORK -- "Men are sh--d of cowardly custards who do what women force them."

psychiatrist -- female -- made statement before an all-women audience gathered in New York to hear answers to the question: "What's holding women back?"

Frances F. Farnham, associate professor in psychiatry at Columbia University, also told the National Women's Conference in the United States that she isn't sure what are holding women back or women are being held back; she took the view that females of the land are doing what they want to.

Farnham, writer of many co-authors, "Modern Women Lost Sex," said women want to be Cleopatra and spend more money on being Cleopatra than on education, anyway. She said, "I don't agree anyway with her parents." When K. M. Gottschall, director of women at the University of Pennsylvania, then can think.

Farnham said that women have a biological role to fill -- children. And from the start of the last decade there's no sign that they're held back. But she's more, the psychiatrist that many contemporary men, though educated, tend to be, and to raise their own men -- rather than assigning task to a paid homemaker. She added, "As a resource, we are a vital necessity. In some and there's some question about whether they can be spared to do work outside."

No one has done more in their role as homemaker and mother and women need the accusatory eye taken off them," Dr. Farnham said.

In addition to responsibility to husband and children, there are the gadgets to maintain and sustain in the home.

Dr. Farnham cited the following example of what's involved in gadget-watching:

"There stands a freezer and a woman must go to market during sales. Otherwise, the freezer isn't productive."

--When peaches are harvested, the woman with a freezer must stop everything and peel the things, getting them into the freezer to make it more productive."

Then consider the unexpected events in family life. "Like mumps," Dr. Farnham said, "then don't strike by appointment -- so mom must be there to take care of Junior."

The psychiatrist said it's strictly mom's work to get Junior well, and if dad fails to care for the child with the same vigor, "he'd have a nervous breakdown."

Another speaker, Frances Elizabeth Willis, U.S. Ambassador to Norway, suggested that women are holding back because they don't have staying power. That is, they don't stick with a job long enough.

However, Dr. Farnham said females are equipped biologically to stick it out. She cited the staying power needed to go through a pregnancy.

Six Cadets Honored

Six Brigham Young University Air Force ROTC cadets were honored as the first six "cadets" announced Lt. Col. William J. Gibson, chairman of the department of air science, recently.

Cadet Col. Willard Phillips, Phillipsburg, N.J.; Cadet Major John L. Christensen, Idaho Falls, Idaho; and Cadet Major Wayne D. Allen of Provo were among those honored.

The other three cadets are Cadet Major Calvard S. Allen, Jerryton, Texas; Cadet Major James C. Phillips, Arlington, Va.; and Cadet Captain George E. Harmon, Caldwell, Idaho.

They were chosen on the basis of outstanding qualities of military leadership, moral character, academic aptitude for professional service, and a distinguished record of academic and demonstrated leadership accomplishments while participating in recognized campus activities.

genetics Advance ...Man, Someday, May Change Biological Makeup of Humansby Joseph L. Myler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A noted geneticist believes man one day will be able to choose the sex of his children.

He also believes it likely that man will learn how to change and perhaps improve the biological makeup of the human species to exercise some control over disease and the process of aging.

Dr. Alan T. Waterman, director of the National Science Foundation, expressed these views in a recent discussion of progress being made in genetic research.

GENETICS is the study of the biological processes and materials by means of which living organisms produce their hereditary traits. This is a relatively new science, according to Waterman, "in the midst of an exciting period of tremendous advance."

Man, he said, is "beginning to understand some of the exceedingly complex processes of biological inheritance." This understanding still is extremely sketchy.

But as understanding progresses," Waterman said, "Dramatic accomplishments can be foreseen, some of which will bring with them a host of related social problems.

"FOR BETTER or worse, it appears inevitable that man will have the means to predetermine the sex of his offspring."

"And it is entirely likely that one day man will have the ability to alter, and even improve, his biological makeup, and to achieve a measure of genetic control over disease and aging."

Waterman said these achievements would be "steps in the process of man's effort to understand the process of evolution and the possibilities for his future development."

He said the Foundation has stepped up its support for biological research to help meet the "spectacular rise" in the cost of laboratory equipment.

ELECTRONIC computers and electron microscopes have joined the test tube as standard laboratory items, he said.

Waterman said recent research projects already appear to be "converging towards a remarkably improved understanding of the more general problem."

Changes in the genetic materials of the reproductive cells are responsible for evolutionary changes in a species as a whole.

Researchers also have discovered, Waterman said, "A genetic basis for behavioral differences" among members of the same species.

For example, Dr. D. A. Rodger and Dr. G. E. McCleary of the University of California "are demonstrating in mice a genetic variation in their preference for alcohol."

"These are indeed," Waterman said, "exciting times in biology."

Intramural Scores

All sports directors for regular school halls, social units, wards, clubs and independent organizations are reminded that the closing date for the registration of the cross-country run, turkey trot, are November 11 and November 15, respectively.

The turkey trot will begin at 4 p.m. Nov. 17. All entrants will meet at the northeast corner of the playing field west of the Fieldhouse for race instructions. They will then proceed through the parking lot to the northeast corner of the Fieldhouse, north along the parking lot to the southwest corner of the baseball field and up the hill between the baseball diamond and the football field to the walk east of the stadium. From the ramp, down the ramp to the southwest corner of the Fieldhouse, then will run into the stadium track and once around the track for the finish.

Division play in flag football is about half over and San Diego City, San Jose, Salt Lake City, Salt Ward and Tucson are concluding their respective divisions. San Diego has the best offensive and defensive units as they have scored 153 points in four games and held opponents to 100.

In the semi-finals of the residence halls singles tennis play Dave Bowen plays Sandy Sia and Don Trotter opposes Lyman Moody in the final set place. There is also some competition in table tennis, horseshoes and badminton being conducted by the Intramural Dept.

This, however, does not prove that Montana plays dirty football or that Ray Jenkins coaches dirty football.

The films may show that what happened in the BYU-Montana game was a direct result of hard played football, the kind of football that teams who want to win play.

The films and Commissioner Brechner's interpretation of the films will tell the story. But maybe only the protest will not go through. Protests seldom do. In any event, Tally deserves a pat on the back for taking his stand, on very soft ground, not only for himself but for his players.

Denver, who looked impressive in early season play, has never quite recovered fully from the injuries and has dropped one-sided games to Utah and New Mexico since the MSU game.

Showdown: Ags, Pokes Duel

The stage is set for the Utah State-Wyoming football game this weekend in Logan. Both are unbeaten in conference play and the Skyline Conference football championship is the prize. The Utah State team ranks first in the nation in total offense and rushing. Wyoming is not far behind in national recognition. They are fourth in total offense and sixth in rushing.

THE AGGIES also boast the nation's second leading rusher in pint-sized Tom Larscheid. Larscheid, who also leads the conference in scoring, returned the opening kickoff 102 yards for a touchdown last Saturday against Brigham Young in Logan.

The Cowboys big gun is fullback Jerry Hill. The 200 pound speedster led the Pokes to a 17-7

MOORE ABOUT SPORTS

by Danny Moore

Universe Sports Editor

Hats off to Tally Stevens! Tally showed me something last week when he filed his formal protest to the Skyline Commissioner Paul Brechner. Tally charged that the Montana State University Grizzlies employed dirty football tactics in their 7-6 loss to the Cougars on Oct. 22 in Missoula.

ON THE SPOT

Football coaches are a funny lot. In pre-season interviews they bemoan their lack of material and trade hard luck stories. During the season they are fierce competitors, pitting football machine against football machine and hoping that his will win.

Football coaches also believe that they are a select group and are, in a way, just that. They stick together. This is why Tally put himself on the spot with the protest.

Tally's Cougars are having a miserable season. They have won only two ball games. Their offense is sluggish and their defense is spotty. The Cats' progress has, however, been impeded by numerous injuries.

Many may claim that Tally, in filing the protest, was looking for an "out" in his charge of "dirty football" which sidelined end Gene Franzik for the rest of the season and laid out Jack Guillard and LeRoy Overstreet.

From my side of the field, it appears that the fact that the Cougars won the game in question dissolves any doubt about Tally's reason for the protest. There must be something to it.

On the other hand, perhaps Grizzly coach, Ray Jenkins, was looking for an out in his counter-charge of dirty football.

FILM AS EVIDENCE

Tally claims that the game films show specific evidence of MSU's rugged fullback Gary Smith doing naughty things no less than nine different times.

These same films are being sent to the Commissioner for study and deliberation.

If the Grizzlies have been playing dirty football the entire year, I wonder why the protest has been so long in coming. Denver University coach John Rongen could have very easily claimed "foul play" in DU's 26-12 loss to the Grizzlies on Oct. 15 in Denver. Rongen and the Pioneers lost the services of seven players due to injuries in the game.

Denver, who looked impressive in early season play, has never quite recovered fully from the injuries and has dropped one-sided games to Utah and New Mexico since the MSU game.

This, however, does not prove that Montana plays dirty football or that Ray Jenkins coaches dirty football.

The films may show that what happened in the BYU-Montana game was a direct result of hard played football, the kind of football that teams who want to win play.

The films and Commissioner Brechner's interpretation of the films will tell the story. But maybe only the protest will not go through. Protests seldom do. In any event, Tally deserves a pat on the back for taking his stand, on very soft ground, not only for himself but for his players.

Looking for a fourth-place in Skyline standings, Brigham Young University meets the University of New Mexico Saturday. BYU has a 3-2 record, and New Mexico a 1-2 record. This weekend should see a fourth-place candidate firmly in place.
